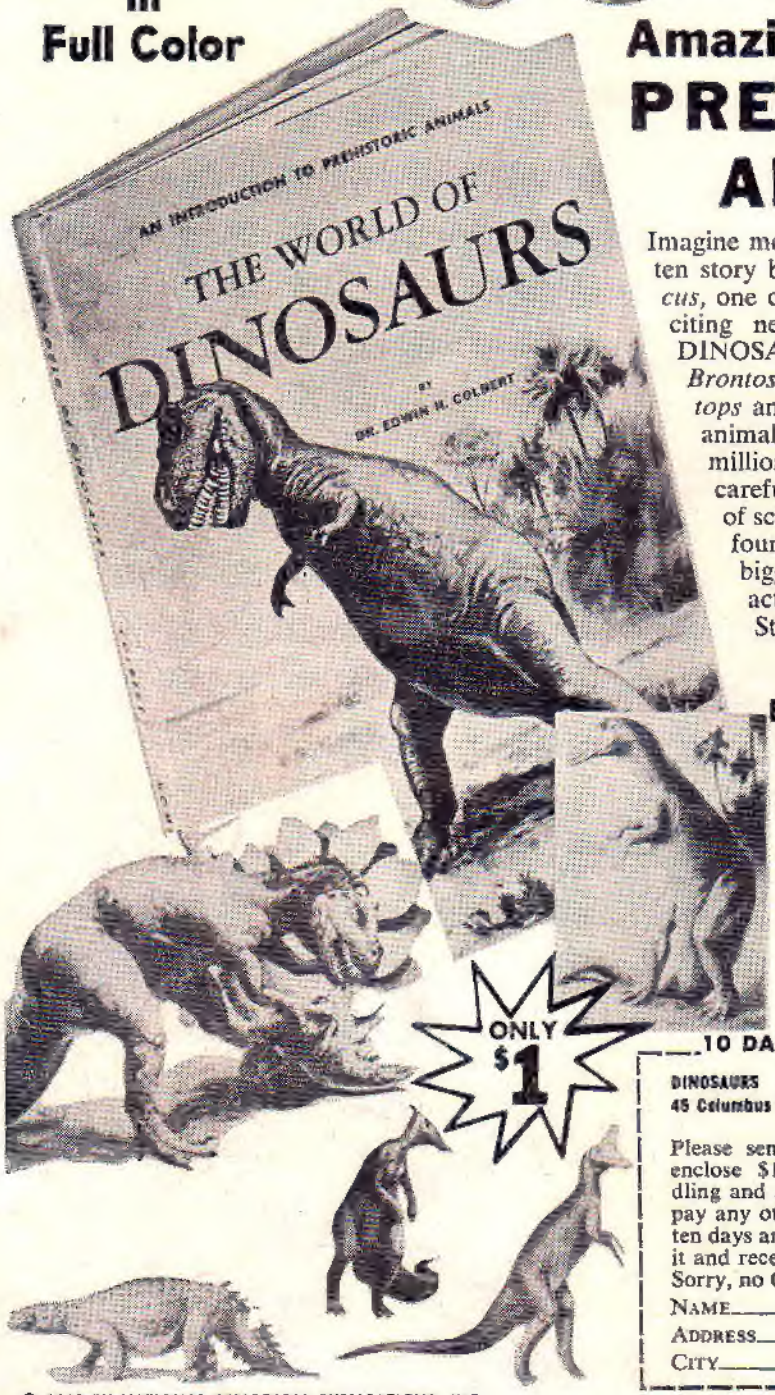
There too, you will see Brontosaurus, Tyrannosaurus, Triceratops and many, many other prehistoric animals that ruled planet Earth for 100 million years. These animals have been carefully reconstructed by thousands of scientists from bones and skeletons found throughout the world. The biggest dinosaurs, the Sauropods, actually ruled the area of the United States.



AUTHORITATIVE BEAUTIFULLY ILLUSTRATED

The WORLD OF DINOSAURS is written by Dr. Edwin H. Colbert, Chairman Department of Vertebrate Paleontology – the American Museum of Natural History. HAVE you been thinking about getting a pet? And then you've wondered if you have enough space to have one, or enough time to take care of one? Then here's a suggestion: What about getting a turtle? He's a nice, pleasant, friendly little fellow who is as little trouble to his master as any pet there is.

The turtle is an interesting pet mainly because he is just the opposite from other pets we like that we choose for their pep and bounce. Not so, the turtle! He has plenty of time on his hands and takes an awful lot of it to carry on the business of living! He's as pokey as they come—poking his head in and out of his shell; poking it in and out of the water; or poking along, one leg after the other—so-o-o slowly!

The turtle, as a matter of fact, has two shells—one on his back, and the other under his tummy. Between these two protective shells, is his soft body—with no bones! Your bones keep your body firm and protected, only they're inside you. The turtle's bones are outside him, in the form of the shells.

Some turtles live to be very, very old. You might suppose this is because they are never in a hurry, and they get plenty of rest! They live a very easy life, especially in the winter! Wild turtles, and even some pet ones, hibernate every winter, like bears.

Since eating takes effort, they might not live so easy a life in the summer! That is the season when they eat, and eat, and eat. They eat a tremendous amount of food in order to store up fat to live on during their winter sleep. But, if you keep your pet turtle in a warm home all winter, he will very likely forget all about hibernating and just keep poking around in the open the whole year through.

Thousands of Cumberland Terrapin are sold every year in pet shops and five-and-tens. It is a very small and prettily colored turtle. Its colors are sometimes so bright (on its underside) that it's hard to believe someone hasn't done a paint job on them! The underside of his shell is yellow, and it has markings that look like Chinese writing. No two turtles are marked alike—as the fingerprints of no two persons are alike!

Since this pet terrapin loves the water, you must make arrangements for it when you construct his home. Here is what you can do: Get a shallow, wooden box and fill it with sand. At one end of the box, sink a shallow dish or leakproof basin into the sand up to the rim. Pour water into it—and presto! your turtle's got an artificial lake right at his doorstep!

Next, place a flattish stone or two at the water's edge. Your turtle will use them to hoist himself up out of the water and onto the sand. There should also be sunlight so that he can dry off, so be sure his habitat is in a place where the sun strikes it part of the time. Mr. Turtle LOVES to take sun baths—but not only that—the sun, along with good food, keeps his shell hard and healthy.

Water turtles cannot breathe under water. That's why they have to keep poking their heads out for air. But they do love being in a pool and will spend a lot of their time there. They even insist on dining in the water. So put their food in the water. If you try to give it to them on land, they just won't bite!

Your turtle has a good appetite and he likes a varied diet. The turtle food (dried ants' eggs) that you buy in boxes at your pet shop is good for your pokey pet, but it should not be the only thing you give him to eat. He loves bits of lettuce, water plants, meat (especially liver and beef), worms, fish, and bugs. All his food should be cut into bits and pieces for him.
